Hitler Wants Germany To Be Independent from The Rest of the World

Sounds Proclamation Before 800,000 Nazis in Fourth Annual Convention at Nurnberg for Economic Reorganization.

HITS COMMUNISTS

Declares Army, Navy and Air Forces are Capable of Defending Germany Against Enemies.

(Copyright, 1936, By Associated Press)

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 9—Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler today proclaimed a four year program, embracing aggressive colonial demands, aimed at the goal of making Germany economically independent of the rest of the world.

The proclamation, sounded suddenly before 800,000 Nazis assembled in fourth annual convention, disclosed Der Fuehrer has signed decrees reorganizing the national economy and hiking the planned production of all industrial and agricultural products.

Their realization, he declared, "is only a question of our energy and determination."

"Our colonial demands," the proclamation went on, "are part and parcel of this program.

"We must build up our raw material forces."

The "raising by bootstraps" decrees also contained schemes for increasing German exports, but the details were not disclosed in the proclamation, which was read by Adolf Wagner, the Bavarian Nazi leader.

Politically Safe

Wagner, who imitates Hitler's voice so perfectly that it seemed as if Der Fuehrer himself were speaking, asserted the Reich had been made politically independent in the last four years; hence the next four would be devoted to economic independence.

In the proclamation Der Fuehrer pointed with pride to his building program, and, extolling "regeneration" of German arts, observed: "This occurred without a single Jew being in a position of influence."

Clamorous applause greeted the reading of this section of the proclamation.

Similarly, the reading of the announcement was interrupted for a long time by hails when Hitler emphasized "the shackles of the Versailles treaty have been torn" and declared the army, navy and air force were capable of defending Germany against all enemies.

Comments on "Unrest"

He contrasted "unrest" elsewhere in the world with the "peaceful" Olympic games in Germany and added:

"Even the Jewish scribes can no longer lie about us. What we have achieved we have done at nobody else's expense. If other nations had attended to their own business, there would be a stronger community of interest in Europe today."

In the center of the huge flag-draped platform sat the Fuehrer surrounded by delegations of the highest national socialist authorities. Before the party leaders, 30,000 favored delegates who crowded the auditorium to capacity cheered and shouted their acclaim.

Other governments, the Reichschancellor's proclamation stated, had nowhere near the difficulties of Germany, chiefly because of Germany's limited soil and the density of her population.

"Germany is compelled to obtain raw materials by the sale of industrial goods abroad," he continued. "It is regrettable that the world does not understand this.

"Had Germany not lost her colonies, we could master our difficulties more easily."

Germany's standard of living, Der Fuehrer insisted, has become relatively high.

However, he explained at length wages cannot be raised just now.

Ripe Communism

Hitler's proclamation also ripped sharply into Communism, declaring in crass words that "bad times reign all about us."

He denounced "Communist wirepullers" whom, he said, "we National Socialists never have feared, but against whom we always have warned others."

Toward the end of the proclamation Hitler mentioned the new, doubled, two-year military service, asserting:

"I have no doubt but that German youth will serve without batting an eye. I spent four years in the army during the World War."

It was expected the details of the four-year economic plan would be disclosed at subsequent sessions of the convention.

Earlier, pointing a warning finger at Spain's bloody civil war, Julius Streicher, high priest of anti-Semitism, told the meeting that Germany is determined not to tolerate "the organized and systematic destruction of civilization."

Reports that Dr. Ernst (Putzy) Hanfstaengl, Harvard-educated intimate of Der Fuehrer, would be removed from his post as head of the foreign press section were denied officially in a special list of party leaders published at the convention.

Divine Will Direct Million in Voting

New York, Sept. 9 (AP).—A bid by the Union party for the support of Major A. "Father" Divine and his Harlem religious group has been disclosed by the director of the party's colored voters' division.

The director, Thomas W. Myles, of Los Angeles, talked with Divine yesterday and said he probably would address a Harlem rally tonight in behalf of Rep. William Lemke's candidacy for the presidency.

"I can't say now that Father Divine will declare for Lemke for President at the meeting," Myles said, "but he will make an announcement shortly. His 'righteous government' platform is practically the same as ours, especially on the money issuing question and enforcement of constitutional rights."

Estimates of Father Divine's following conflict but Myles said "at least 400,000 in Harlem and a million in the United States are waiting to be advised by him on how to vote."

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 9 (AP)—George D. Aiken, 44-year-old farmer-horticulturist who in four years of active state politics rose from the Vermont House to the lieutenant-governorship, was the Republican choice for governor today.

Aiken polled 23,594 votes to defeat Col. H. Nelson Jackson, banker and newspaper owner; Ernest E. Moore, speaker of the House, and John Reid, real estate man. Jackson received 19,613, Moore 77,965, Read, 1262.

There was no contest for the Democratic nomination. State Senator Alfred H. Heininger will oppose Aiken in the election. Charles A. Plumley, Republican incumbent, won renomination to the National House, defeating Edwin M. Meekings, who campaigned as a Townsendite, 41,207 to 12,145. John B. Candon will oppose Plumley at the election.

Accolade For Cross

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 9 (AP)—State Chairman J. Henry Roraback in opening the Republican state convention here last night brought an accolade to Governor Wilbur L. Cross, Democratic chief executive.

Smilingly referring to Gov. Cross as the "nice old gentleman from New Haven," Roraback startled delegates by saying that he and the late Gov. Simeon L. Baldwin, whose Democratic administration preceded that of Gov. Cross, were "two of the best governors the state has ever had."

South Carolina

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 9 (AP)—Returns from a run-off primary gave a working majority in the House today to Governor Olin Johnston, who ousted with troops a year ago a state road board he accused of graft. The anti-Johnston forces, however, continued to wield an overwhelming majority in the Senate, although Johnston adherents gained a few seats.

G. Heyward Mahon, Greenville merchant, was nominated to Congress from the fourth district, defeating Joseph A. Bryson, for the post made vacant by the death of Rep. John J. McSwain.

Townsendites Trail

Seattle, Sept. 9 (AP)—Production-for-use and Townsend candidates trailed for the governorship but fared better in congressional bids—including the seat of the late Marion A. Zioncheck—as counting proceeded today of votes cast in Tuesday's primary.

Defeat of Mrs. Rosalie Jones Dill, divorced recently by former U. S. Senator C. C. Dill after a sensational trial, was another feature. She aspired to Congress.

Returns from 804 of 2,866 precincts in the race for the Democratic nomination for governor gave:

Gov. Clarence D. Martin, 36,395.

John C. Stevenson, Production-for-use, 31,380.

State Treasurer Otto Case, endorsed by Townsend old age pension groups, 16,615.

For the Republican gubernatorial nomination 804 precincts gave:

Former Governor Roland H. Hartley, 13,518.

Walter F. Meier, 7,350.

Claims Nomination

Denver, Sept. 9 (AP)—Gov. Ed C. Johnson claimed the Democratic nomination for United States senator on the strength of a 18,046 vote majority he held early today in more than one-third of the state 1,521 precincts.

Townsend - endorsed candidates trailed in two congressional districts and led in a third.

In 652 precincts Johnson, twice elected governor, polled 23,480 votes against 15,434 for former Gov. William E. Sweet, who declined comment on the governor's victory claim.

Both candidates professed support for President Roosevelt's administration.

Raymond L. Sauter, Sterling attorney, was unopposed for the Republican nomination for senator, and State Treasurer Charles M. Armstrong was the party's only aspirant to the governorship. Both Sauter and Armstrong held Townsend endorsements.

Teller Ammons, Denver state senator, led two rivals for the Democratic nomination for governor in returns from all sections.

Arizona Results.

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 9 (AP)—Threatened defeat of Governor B. B. Moeur and the strong congressional bid of a Townsendite stood out as votes were counted today from Tuesday's primary ballot boxes.

R. C. Stanford, Phoenix attorney and former jurist who campaigned against Arizona's two per cent sales tax, led Governor Moeur for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Returns from 125 complete and 146 incomplete precincts out of 446 gave Stanford 22,955 votes to 15,758 for Moeur.

On the Republican ticket, Thomas E. Campbell, former governor and nationally known political figure, led Foster has signed an order directing that the Broadway Theatre property be sold in one parcel at public auction at the front door of the court house by George Kaufman, referee, the date to be fixed by the referee. The sale will be held under direction of the court in an action brought by the Kingston Trust Company, as trustee for bondholders, against the Kingston Theatre Corporation and others.

Bonds purchased by individuals at the time of the construction of the Broadway Theatre and now outstanding together with interest, etc., amount to $370,940.45. The trustee's action against the Kingston Theatre Corporation and others is brought now to secure payment of the bonds and interest due.

In the order of Justice Foster it also provides for counsel fees, extra allowances, expenditures, etc., of counsel and the bank as trustee and for the expenditures of the referee for his services and in advertising the sale of the property. Senator Charles W. Walton appears in the proceeding for the Kingston Trust Company, trustee for bond-holders. The order was dated September 8, 1936.

Homer J. Emerick Succeeds Gregory On Public Works

Homer J. Emerick, widely known contractor of this city, has been appointed a member of the Board of Public Works to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of Ralph Gregory of Gregory & Company. Mayor C. J. Heiselman announced the appointment of Commissioner Emerick this morning.

Commissioner Gregory declined reappointment after serving four years on the board on the ground that his business required his full attention. Mayor Heiselman this morning expressed regret on losing Mr. Gregory as a member of the board as he has proven one of its most valuable members during the past four years.

Mr. Emerick who succeeds Mr. Gregory is a successful contractor and manufacturer of concrete blocks. He is also proprietor of the Emerick bowling alleys on Albany avenue, and has always taken a deep interest in recreation for the young people of the city.

The appointment of Commissioner Emerick was filed with City Clerk E. J. Dempsey this morning by the mayor.

Six French Fliers Killed.

Gendarmes guarded the wreckage, pending an investigation.

Death Rate of Babies in Kingston Is Too High the Board of Health Thinks

Will Ask Physicians to Explain Why Infants Die in Greater Numbers Here Than in Other Communities of State.

OFFICERS PRAISED

Anti-Noise Ordinance Effective in Part, But There's Room for Improvement; Arrests Suggested.

What is the reason that Kingston has a higher infant mortality death rate than other cities in the state? Is it due to lack of skill on the part of some of the local obstetricians, or is it due to causes that the attending physician can not prevent? Those are a few of the questions that the members of the Board of Health would like answered and which were fully discussed at the regular monthly meeting of the board last evening in the city hall.

As a result of the discussion the board directed that a letter be drafted and sent to every practicing obstetrician in the city asking them to explain more fully the causes of death of infants under one year of age in the city. Where the cause is given as premature to state more fully whether it was due to the parents being afflicted with social disease.

As the matter now stands when a death certificate is filed with the board it does not give the board much information as to what caused the premature birth, for the high infant mortality rate here is principally due to the above cause, it was stated.

It was stated that there were tests made of the parents before the birth of the child by successful obstetricians, and the health officer was instructed to get in touch with the attending physician when a still birth was reported or the child died within a short time after birth and ask the physician if the tests had been made, and if so, what the tests had shown.

The physicians, who are members of the health board, believed that no physician would feel offended in furnishing the information.

It was brought out that the board has a chart on file in the office which shows the number of births each year; who the attending physician was and also the number of deaths together with the name of the attending doctor. A glance at this chart shows which physician is losing the largest number of infants as well as the number of births at which he officiates.

Congratulate Sanford.

Dr. L. E. Sanford, health officer, and his staff, were congratulated on the excellent health conditions that prevailed in the city during the past summer as shown by the monthly reports on health conditions here.

A Salutary Effect.

It was stated that since the adoption of the anti-noise ordinance that there had been a decrease in the amount of noises in the city, but that there was still room for improvement in the situation. It was suggested that if the police made a few arrests for violation of the ordinance it might have a salutary effect.

One noise item that was due to the lack of carelessness or the fact that the offender was afflicted with a lack of brains was the man or woman who drove up in front of a house and sat in the car honking the horn to call attention to their arrival. "Just Nit Wit No. 1" observed a member of the board.

To Install Toilet.

It was reported to the board that the orders to eliminate outside toilets on Delaware avenue and Hudson street had been carried out. On Delaware avenue the family had moved out when the toilet was removed but on Hudson street the family were now using the woodshed as a toilet. The board decided to have a toilet installed in the house at a cost not to exceed $65 and to charge that amount against the property on the city tax roll.

The reports of the officers were read and ordered filed:

Witnesses Testify in Inquest Into the Death Of Augustus Albright

Physician and Police Give Statements Concerning Auto Accident, July 25, Fatal to Engineer of the Forst Plant.

INQUEST ADJOURNED

Sidney Black, Truck Driver, Makes No Statement on Advice of His Attorney, A. J. Cook.

Several witnesses were sworn this morning before Coroner Leston D. DuBois of New Paltz in the inquest held upon the body of August Albright, 53, who was fatally injured on the evening of July 25 at the entrance to the Rondout creek bridge when the car of Sidney Black struck Mr. Albright. An adjournment was taken in order to give the police department an opportunity to subpoena other witnesses who are employed on the Erie canal and whose absence from town prevented their appearance at this time. The adjournment ance at this time. The adjourned date will be set later.

August Albright, of 52 Ravine street, who was employed as a machinist at the Forst Packing plant, was crossing Wurts street near its intersection with Abeel street about 9:40 o'clock in the evening. In company with another man he was proceeding easterly. The truck of Black was proceeding off the bridge and in the car were Mr. and Mrs. Julius Kirschner of 12 Clifton avenue. Mr. Albright was removed from the scene in one of the prowl cars of the police Department which was in charge of Officers Burns and Mahoney and he died there later. Coroner DuBois conducted the investigation with members of the police department.

Dr. D. W. Meyers, who with Dr. Joseph Jacobson performed an autopsy upon the body, testified that severe chest injuries, minor external abrasions, fractured ribs, a fracture of the spine and various internal injuries were discovered on the autopsy. The opinion of the physicians was that death was due to the many fractured ribs, fracture of the spine and the internal injuries to various organs.

Dr. Meyers was asked as to whether an examination of the contents of the stomach disclosed intoxication and he replied that while the contents of the stomach were examined at the city laboratory that examination would not disclose with any degree of certainty intoxication. He did say, however, that in addition an examination had been made of the spinal fluid.

Both the stomach contents and the spinal fluid were positive. The spinal fluid showed alcohol present to the amount of about .2 per cent.

Asked as to what this indicated he said that authorities held that an alcoholic content of over .2 per cent indicated intoxication but that .2 per cent or under did not. The analysis showed the case in point to be a border-line case.

Makes No Statement

Sidney Black, owner and operator of the Chevrolet dump truck was represented by A. J. Cook and did not make any statement at the inquest. He was advised as to his rights by Assistant District Attorney N. LeVan Haver, who conducted the examination of witnesses, and on advice of counsel made no statement.

Sergeant Phinney was the first witness called. He said he had taken statements at the city hall from those who had been at the scene. The sergeant said Mr. Black had told him that he had left Port Ewen about 9:20 and had crossed the bridge on his way up the hill when the accident happened. In the car was Mr. and Mrs. Kirschner. When they were about to leave the end of the bridge the light was green on Wurts street and he proceeded over the street. At that time he saw two men in the middle of Wurts street. One of them started easterly across the street and the larger of the two men grabbed hold of the smaller man and pulled him back. At that time the car was at the white line and the larger man held the smaller man. Just as the car was near the men the smaller one broke loose and darted in front of the car. Black told the sergeant that he applied his brakes, the man was struck and when the truck was stopped it was 10 feet beyond where the man lay.

Sergeant Phinney said he dispatched Officer Burns in one of the prowl cars to the scene. Black signed the statement which he made at the city hall.

Officer James F. Burns was called. He said he was in the vicinity in the police prowl car with Officer Mahoney. It was a couple of minutes after the accident when he got there and people had started to pick up the injured man. He helped put him in the prowl car and took him to the Kingston Hospital. Fred Albright accompanied the injured man. He had been his companion.

Officer Mahoney Called

Officer Mahoney was next called. He said he and Officer Burns had been in the prowl car on Abeel street. They had just located a stolen car near the fire station and were reporting to headquarters when he heard a crash. The car was about 100 or 125 feet from the scene. He got out of the car and ran to the scene. As he did so he observed the light on Abeel street was red at the bridge and he presumed the light was green over Wurts street in the direction the Black car was traveling. The light however could

Savatgy Sells Candyland To Mrs. Bertha Peckerman For Price Set at $60,000

Will Continue Business Until January 2, Date Fixed for Local Woman to Take Over Entire Wall Street Property.

NEEDS REST

Savatgy Gives Up 17-Year-Old Business for Good of Health; Came Here in 1919.

Activity in Wall street real estate continues and another big transaction was made public today with the announcement by George Savatgy, proprietor of Candyland, that he has sold his business and real estate at 324 Wall street, to Mrs. Bertha Peckerman of 271 Main street, Kingston.

Possession is to be given January 2, 1937. Up to that time the present proprietor will continue his restaurant and confectionery business as usual and hopes to meet his old friends as in the past.

The amount involved in the transaction was not given out, but is understood to be about $60,000.

Mr. Savatgy came to Kingston and purchased the confectionery business at 324 Wall street, then known as the Priscilla Alden Candy Shop, in June, 1919, following his discharge from the U. S. Army. Previous to his World War service he had conducted movie theatres at Highland Falls and Saugerties.

The business prospered under his management and about three years after coming to Kingston Mr. Savatgy purchased the property from the late Henry Hoffman. He has since conducted the business there, ably assisted by Mrs. Savatgy and under the name of Candyland a fine patronage has been enjoyed during the past 17 years. Mr. Savatgy said this morning that his only reason for disposing of the property, which he does with great regret, is the fact that for a year or more past his health has not been of the best and acting under the physician's orders he intends to take a much needed rest. He has made no plans for the future, but expects with his family to remain in Kingston. He feels very grateful to his many friends and the public generally who during the years have made his success possible and says that for his part any failure to satisfy has not been because he has not tried to please those who have favored him with their patronage.

The real estate involved in the transaction comprises a three-story brick building, running through from Wall street to Fair street. The first floor is occupied by the Candyland restaurant and confectionery business. There are offices on the second floor, with a large dance hall. The third floor is given over to apartments. Mr. Savatgy has spent many thousands of dollars on improvements to the property as well as the business since he first took it over. This is especially true of the first floor which has been modernly equipped in every detail and bears little resemblance to the original store and furnishings.

Plans Reunion of 51st Pioneers Here Sunday, Sept. 13

EUGENE CORNWELL

Sunday, September 13, will be a big day for members of the Fifty-first Pioneer Infantry Association when the 13th annual reunion of the regimental association will be held in this city. The business session will be held in the Kingston Municipal Auditorium and will start at 11 o'clock. A number of the members are expected to arrive in this city on Saturday afternoon and evening and starting early Sunday morning the buddies will begin to gather for the day's festivities. Breakfast will be served in the dining room of the auditorium to those who care to eat.

Following the business session the members will journey to Golden Rule Inn where the annual dinner will be served.

A final meeting of the committee will be held this evening to make sure that everything has been taken care of and that everything will be set when the doors of the auditorium open on Sunday morning.

A number of the local members have signified their intention of being present at the reunion but have neglected to mail in their reservation card, which should be done at once in order that the dinner committee will know how many to make plans for. Reservations continue to come in from out of town members and a large attendance is looked for.

Local officers of the association who are working hard to make the reunion a success are: Eugene Cornwell, secretary; Peter Keresman, treasurer; Robert L. Rice, sergeant-at-arms and George McCullough representing M Company on the executive committee.

MINNEAPOLIS WPA STRIKERS RETURN TO JOBS

Minneapolis, Sept. 9 (AP)—The strike of Minneapolis WPA workers ended today after an open break between the Federal Workers Section of General Drivers Union 544 and the Workers Alliance.

WPA employes who are members of the Federal Workers section voted to return to work last night over the protests of Workers Alliance, an organization of WPA workmen which called the walkout last week. More than 6,000 men participated in the four-day "holiday."

Increased pay was the main objective but work was resumed on all except the Minneapolis airport project at the same wage scale which prevailed before the demonstration. Airport workers planned to vote separately on whether to continue a strike.

Grain elevators and mills remained idle and wholesale grocery deliveries were curtailed in two other strikes.

MISS HEANEY RETURNS LOST BABY TO MOTHER

As Miss Anna Heaney, truant officer of the public school system, looked out of the front window of her home at 48 Foxhall avenue yesterday morning she saw a little baby crawling about in the middle of the road. Traffic was growing heavy and Miss Heaney realizing the danger to the child rushed out, picked it up and took it into her home. The baby was too young to talk, and she got in touch with the police and Chief Wood sent out a general alarm over the radio while Miss Heaney also got busy and used the telephone in calling up families who she knew had babies. As a result of the intensive work the mother called several hours later and her baby was restored to her anxious arms.

Year 1937 Will Be One of Natural Anniversaries for New York State

Chalmers L. Pancoast, Deputy Grand Commander of the Grand Commandery, Knights Templar of the State of New York, while attending the 113th annual assembly of the Grand Council of Royal and Select Masters of the state held in Kingston recently, was impressed with the rich historical background of the city, and complimented W Frank Davis of this city for his leaflet on "Historical Kingston," which he had written for the assembly. During 1937 there will be a number of important historical anniversaries to be celebrated throughout the state, and among those of particular interest to Kingston are the 155th anniversary of General George Washington opening a Masonic Lodge in this city in 1782 the 159th anniversary of the first regular Masonic Lodge organized in Kingston in 1788, the 177th anniversary of the building of the D A. R. House in 1660

So interested was Mr Pancoast in the historic associations of this old Colonial town and also of the state that he has furnished The Freeman with the following article on "1937 a Year of Natural Anniversaries for New York State."

The Empire State has many "Natural" and important anniversaries in 1937 which should be celebrated The year also presents opportunities to honor the names of famous New Yorkers who possessed virtues for building a nation (The year 1937 and 1938 are important in the history of Kingston)

Their anniversaries should be commemorated and high tribute paid to them for what they were, and what they did for our state and nation

New York state would never have been known as the "Empire State" had it not been for the dreams of "The Clintons"

To "The Clintons" New York owes the two great highways, which have made New York city the leading metropolis of the nation The two great highways are the Erie Canal and Erie Railway

A "Natural" anniversary which should be celebrated will be October, 1937, the 160th anniversary of the heroic stand of General James Clinton, father of De Witt Clinton and brother of Gen George Clinton He held Fort Clinton, on the Hudson, with 4,000 men against 6,000 under Sir Henry Clinton (his cousin), an English general James Clinton was wounded and after an heroic stand escaped for further service to his country.

In 1779 General James Clinton and General Sullivan, at the close of an expedition against the Iroquois Indians in the southern tier of counties of New York state, proposed to Congress the construction of what they termed an "Appian Way" from the city of New York to Lake Erie The Great Lakes, which have done so much to develop the rich, but formerly inaccessible West, were at the time separated from the seacoast by the mountain range which stretches from the Gulf States to the St. Lawrence River.

The Great West, the future, but then unrecognized granary of the nation, was more remote from the Atlantic ocean than is today the empire of Japan.

The "Appian Way" dream of James Clinton never got further than an application to Congress for an appropriation. But his dream descended to the son, and De Witt Clinton built the Erie Canal which was completed and dedicated October 26, 1825, and created the "Empire State" title.

In April, 1832—a 105th anniversary in 1937—the legislature of New York granted a charter for the construction of a road of iron, where General James Clinton had dreamed only of one modeled as well as named after the famous highway of ancient Rome.

This old charter gives a curious illustration of the short-sightedness of early politicians It forbade all connections with Pennsylvania and New Jersey railroads So the one terminus of the Erie was at Piedmont on a long pier built out over the flats of the Tappan Zee, to make steamboat connections with New York city. This was the nearest accessible point in the state, on the Hudson to the metropolis The other terminal was at Dunkirk, the most remote western harbor on Lake Erie.

De Witt Clinton—"Father of The Erie Canal"—constructed this canal through the center counties of the state, secured for it the support of the southern counties by promising in return his influence and that of his party for the construction of another highway through the southern region, planned by his father.

Fifty years passed before the first step was taken toward the realization of this "Appian Way."

Meanwhile came the railway. As the canal supplanted the public road, the railway was beginning to supplant the canal.

In 1777, June, General George Clinton was elected the first governor of New York The Ulster County Court House, in Kingston, was the site of the inaugural of the first governor of New York state. A tablet marks the event.

Another important 160th anniversary in a distinguished New York family of Clintons, closely identified with the history of Kingston.

General James Clinton was born in Ulster county, New York, August 9, 1736. (A 200th birthday in 1936.)

His brother, George Clinton, was born at Little Britain, Ulster county (now Orange) New York, July 6 1739. After being elected first governor of the state in 1777, he was re-elected until 1795.

In 1805 he was elected Vice President of the United States under Jefferson, and re-elected under President Madison. He died April 20, 1812, a 125th memorial anniversary which New York will honor.

Bees and "B's"

A telephone repairman set out to fix some trouble in a junction box—the point at which telephone wires leading to subscribers' premises are joined up with the cable to the central office.

He found the box full of bees. He and his foreman consulted the Classified Telephone Directory under "B." Locating a bee man, they telephoned him and told him of their trouble. Under his expert direction, the bees were coaxed into a container and removed.

You'd expect a telephone man to think of the "Classified" when he got into difficulties. It was a case of the doctor taking his own medicine. And we suggest that you, too, remember the Classified Telephone Directory in your difficulties. It is an important link in the service that helps you reach anybody, anywhere, any time.

WORKERS WOULD LIKE TO KNOW

On August 12, the very dependable writer and statistician, Bruce Gustin, placed the average amount going to the relief recipient at $18 per month.

It is general knowledge that in the last five months President Roosevelt expended billions of dollars in relief. It is general knowledge that states, counties and municipalities are also making contributions of record-breaking proportions in behalf of the needy; but, leave these enormous contributions of subordinate governmental structures out of the calculation for the present.

It is estimated that $300 has been distributed to each person on relief, or $60 per month. And Mr. Gustin says the amount actually distributed is $18 per month, which, subtracted from $60, leaves $42; and the great "economic" question is, "Where did that $42 go?"

Maybe Mr. Farley has the answer.

The "cost of administration" of the Roosevelt-Tugwell's Resettlement project is $5.25 for every dollar expended for the "reliefer."

The "cost of administration" of the CCC amounts to $2,800 per year, per "reliefer"; and the "reliefer" receives $300 per year.

The net profit accruing to private industry—the men who create and maintain America's employment—providing enterprises through the years, has averaged 2 per cent on the total gross business done. It is well to contrast what these men have done for the people with what present day politicians are doing to the people.

DUST BOWL SAVED

It is really possible to redeem a "dust bowl," according to a report from Tooele, Utah. "Farmers grin at crops that stay put, housewives hum in immaculate kitchens, and the populace no longer fears a rising wind, now that the desolate Tooele Valley—extending from the southwestern tip of Great Salt Lake—is covered with clinging green growth."

The valley was denuded in 1930, as a result of heavy competitive grazing by transient cattle herds en route from winter to summer pasture. Lowered rainfall added to the damage. The top soil shifted with the wind, and by last year the once level, green valley was a bare, windblown region of pits and hummocks, ravaged by sandstorms. Settlers began to move away. Last March the work of redemption started. Strange instruments were used. Old enemies of the farmer—weeds like tumbleweed, salt brush and Russian thistle—were encouraged to grow wherever they would. In the most eroded areas wide-furrow windbreaks were plowed for miles in straight lines at right angles to prevailing winds. Low drift fences were set up with stakes and barb wires, to catch and hold the blown weeds. Rye and grass were seeded. Now a green mantle is spreading over the ruined soil, with promise that natural grasses will replace the weeds and the region will soon be restored again to human use.

Barring extra-bad luck, this sort of thing can be done by scientific procedure and general co-operation of land-owners with state and federal governments. We should see a great deal of it in the next few years.

NAZISM AND RELIGION

If German Nazism comes to grief, as it may in spite of its recent triumphs, it will probably be wrecked on one of two rocks—war or religion. Just now it seems as likely to be the latter as the former. The Nazis, not content to persecute the Jews, are trying to set up ruthless political control over the Christian church. Nazism itself is regarded by the government as a religion, to which older religions must conform where there is conflict. The latest protest against such action has been the simultaneous attack on Hitler's religious oppression by confessional church pastors throughout Germany.

"With unheard-of force," says their declaration, "the Gospel is fought methodically in Germany. The idea that the Fatherland would turn against the Gospel is incomprehensible to German Christianity. We have long been silent. We have been told that these were the actions of individuals who would be called to order. We have waited. We have made representations. Many pastors have suffered for their faith and have been put in concentration camps. We do not know what is in store for us. But whatever happens, we are bound to obedience to our Father in Heaven."

There seems to be a strange, half-pagan movement afoot to deify Adolf Hitler himself, like the pagan emperors of ancient Rome. The menace may be as great as any since the ancient German tribes were converted to Christianity.

OVER-COOLING

Summer heat does strange things to people and to plumbing. A St. Louis man had his water pipes frozen up the other day, in the midst of a heat wave.

It was a home-made weather-conditioning system gone wrong. Edward McEvilly, himself a plumber, had the bright idea of filling his furnace with ice to cool the house in summer, just as he fills it with coal for winter heat. A water pipe runs up from the furnace through the house. He stoked up with 400 pounds of ice and prepared to cool off. The next thing was frozen water pipes and more plumbing work for the plumber, making him hotter than ever. So that scheme's out.

That Body of Yours

PRURITIS—ITCHING

While pruritis or itching is in or on the skin it is not usually because of any real skin condition that the itching occurs.

There are of course the cases where the skin is bitten by mosquitoes or by pediculi (lice), but generally speaking the itching of the skin is due to the presence of some substance in the blood which is carried to the skin surface.

The itching in hives (urticaria) is due to some substance in the food to which the individual is sensitive. This substance acts as a sort of poison which, when carried to the little nerve endings of the skin, causes the itching.

Similarly in jaundice. Something obstructs the flow of bile into the small intestine; the blood carries some substance that is in the bile to the little nerve endings in the skin and itching results.

Certain general diseases of the body, diabetes and gout for example, are accompanied by itching.

Itching is sometimes caused by a disturbance of the central nervous system; those who are very nervous or hysterical are often afflicted by itching.

An infection from a lazy bowel, from infected teeth, tonsils, or sinuses often causes itching.

You can thus see that in looking for the cause of itching—aside from scabies, lice or mosquitoes—it means a general overhauling of the body by the physician, including an examination of the urine and blood. The presence of bile or too much sugar in the blod may be the cause of the itching.

The first thought is the digestive organs and the regulation of the diet.

Dr. Bernard Fantus, Chicago, in his Handbook of Therapy tells us that there are two types of persons in whom pruritis (itching) is seen; one is the stout, robust, plethoric (full-blooded) person who is continually overeating, and the other is the thin hungry person who is continually starving himself. In the stout individual the diet should be cut down, particularly meat, eggs and fish (proteins), which seem to be the worst offenders, and also starch foods (sugar, potatoes, bread) should be cut down to some extent. Fatty foods should be eaten freely by thin persons. Fruits will be found beneficial to both types.

If the patient is constipated, small doses of calomel, or teaspoonful doses of Epsom salts every morning before breakfast will be of help.

The local applications to relieve itching are many: A teaspoonful of carbolic acid to a quart of water, or a teaspoonful of baking soda to a pint of water are often efficient.

In extreme cases the X-ray, radium or high frequency current may be necessary.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marion Sims

SYNOPSIS: Fourtuin Carol Terrance has gone home from Atlanta to spend Christmas. Equally fearful Blake Thornton, her employer has gone to Florida to try to persuade his neurotic and indifferent wife to divorce him. For he and Carol are deeply in love and realize that come what may they belong to each other. Blake has told Irma his mission and she is being as difficult as she can. Blake holds his temper but not easily.

Chapter 41

FUTILE HOPE

AND then Blake said aloud: "You haven't any conception of love, have you? You can't even imagine loving someone so much you'd die for them. And that's the way I love Carol. If I can't have her I don't want to touch another woman as long as I live!"

The passionate intensity of his voice shattered the glass about her once and for all. She really looked at him—for the first time. His face was white and stark and his eyes burned hotly. He means it, she thought dazedly; he's really mad about her . . .

She played her trump card—an appeal to his chivalry. He could be tender and generous; she remembered that from long ago. Surely he would be that now.

"Blake . . . you think I'm imagining my nervous condition. You think it's because I don't want to be a wife to you. That's not true; it's just that—for a while now—I'm going through a rather—trying time. . . ."

His heart sank heavily. So he had been right in his guess. . . . But he could not let her plead so thin an excuse.

"A great many women manage to endure their husbands and make them happy even then."

"I know," she said plaintively. "And so could I, probably. But I've always been so high-strung, and so I thought best to stay away."

He was moved to pity until he remembered the years before this, and he realized that her appeal did not deserve to be heeded. He said slowly:

"I'm very sorry—for your sake. But your excuse rather falls down, doesn't it? We've been living this hit-or-miss existence for years. You can't justify six years with something that's just happened."

She felt as if she were going mad—as if the walls were really closing in on her. She saw herself discarded for a girl: a middle-aged woman who would become merely an object of humorous pity. She made one more bitter attempt.

"I understand, of course. You married me, knowing that I was older than you, that I was sure to lose my attraction before you lost yours. And now that it's happened you're being a beast, and trying to cast me aside like an old shoe."

Fury almost blinded him, so that he dared not answer her for a moment. At last he said with a creditable attempt at quietness:

"A boy twenty-two doesn't think, Irma; the poor fool just feels. You must have seen that possibility—better than I could. And since you've gone your way so completely there's only one answer: I don't matter to you any more than you do to me."

She said shrilly: "But you do matter! I—couldn't live without you!"

His mouth twisted bitterly. "You've made a pretty good stab at it so far."

"But I've had to. I'll come home with you even if it kills me!"

THE melodrama revolted him. The supreme sacrifice, she was no doubt thinking. He got up and walked to the door and back.

"I'm sorry, but it's too late now. I couldn't play up. Do we have to talk about it any more? I'm offering you a chance to get the divorce yourself, on the grounds of cruelty."

"Suppose I refuse?"

"Then I'll have to get it myself, on the same grounds."

"You can't do it," she almost screamed. "I can refute anything you try to say!" She made a supreme effort at control, and went on in an altered voice.

"Blake, wait a year and see. You got tired of me; how do you know you won't tire of her?"

The room whirled dizzily with him. There was no use, of course, in trying to make her understand.

"I'm sorry, but I'm through—whether you believe me or not. I'll never live with you again; I'm putting the house on the market as soon as I get back, and starting divorce proceedings immediately. If you want to fight it you're at liberty to do so."

Her body sagged. He was speaking the truth and she knew it. At the sight of her ravaged face pity stirred in him, and he said more gently:

"Wouldn't it be wiser to follow my suggestion, Irma, and get the divorce yourself? People will think you're tired of me, and God knows that's plausible enough. . . ."

"And if I do, will you promise to wait a decent interval before you marry this woman? A year?"

So that people might possibly be deceived, he knew she meant.

"Of course I won't. I'm not a child, and neither is she. Our time is too precious."

"Then you'll have to make a cad of yourself and a joke of me. Because I won't do it."

She was bluffing him, of course; thinking he would not dare. And he knew she was bluffing. He stood up.

"I'm sorry you see it that way. I've already talked to a lawyer and the papers will be filed Wednesday."

Irma sprang to her feet. "You'll never get it! They'll throw you out of court!"

He shrugged. "All I can do is try."

He turned away, sick of the sordidness and of her presence. He wanted never to see her again.

"There's no use in prolonging this cheap wrangle. I'm taking the next train home, and the papers will be filed Wednesday. If you want to reconsider you can phone me in the next few hours."

He laid his hand on the door knob and looked steadily at her. "And I hope you have a very merry Christmas. . . ."

He opened the door and went quickly out.

When he had gone Irma flung herself face down upon the bed.

She would be—from now on—one of those homeless, undesired women, who drift from place to place: widows and divorcees who migrate with the seasons. Wherever she went whispers would echo in her ears.

And if she left the South she would hardly escape it: the migratory birds covered the face of the earth, and spread their gossip like pollen on the winds. She had no way of knowing that she was exaggerating her own importance; that what she did or where she went was of vital concern to no one but herself.

She thought wildly: I'll get back at him somehow for the way he's treating me. I've got to get back; I've got to make him suffer. . . .

THE apartment seemed indifferent and empty after the warmth and life of the house in Meredith. Carol closed the door softly and went straight to the telephone without taking off her hat.

Blake answered the telephone himself with an eager "Yes?"

"Blake. . . ." The sound of his voice shook her so that she could not go on.

He said quickly: "Carol, darling. Where are you?"

"At home. I've just gotten in."

"May I come right out?"

"Of course. You're not busy?"

"There's no one here but me. I've been sitting here cursing the hands of my watch."

She did not dare to ask if his news was good or bad; she knew too well that he would have told her if it had been what they hoped for. A porter rang and handed her a florist's box; tea roses and delphinium with a card that said only: "With my heart. . . ."

Blake rang just as she finished arranging the flowers and she almost ran to meet him. He came in quickly and took both her hands and they stood for a space looking hungrily at each other. Then he muttered. "Oh, Carol . . ." and took her in his arms.

She braced herself. "Was it—very bad, Blake?"

He winced. "You knew better than I did, Carol—how do women get like that?"

"I don't know." She laid her hand against his face and he caught it and kissed it. "They're blind from birth, I guess. You'd better—tell me about it."

He told her, dully and accurately, because every word and gesture was burned upon his mind with acid.

"I must have gone crazy at the end," he confessed bitterly. "I threatened her and browbeat her as if I'd been a savage. I—understood how civilized men commit murder: I could have strangled her—and laughed!"

She said quietly: "No, you couldn't. Not really."

"Yes I could have. I wanted to."

LIFTING THE THREAT.

There is fear throughout the country of what the president would do if he should be re-elected.

Business in general is highly suspicious of the president. It can point to promises broken, to laws ignored.

Business would co-operate heartily with President Landon, for he would make possible the one-for-all and all-for-one spirit which President Roosevelt has made unattainable. Plants would expand, men would be willing to take chances, just as they have taken them for years. That initiative which has been discouraged by the legislation of the last few years would reappear.

The vast majority of business enterprises, large and small, in the United States being honest, there would be again a willingness to make sacrifices for the common welfare. Budget balancing would be something more than an expression. A vast political machine would be scrapped, and administration would again become prudent. — Boston Herald.

MAY MEAN TROUBLE.

Democratic orators may have cause for regret if they persist in belittling Alf Landon and picturing him as nothing more than a mediocre and somewhat confused state politician. There are many voters who see no reason why a president should be of scintillating personal brilliance. —Dallas Times-Herald.

WHAT TO EXPECT.

As to the national Democratic platform this year, not one man in a thousand knows or cares what it is, what happened to the national Democratic platform of 1932 having taught the people what to expect.—Charleston, S. C., News and Courier.

TALKS TO PARENTS

Lesson From The Past

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

"Now when I was your age, son,—"

Why do fathers continue to make this same time-worn mistake? Why don't they remember instead how angry they used to get when their fathers said, "In my day, my boy—"?

The same old mistakes are repeated from father to son, and even grown people are unable to learn from experience.

What do Sam or Joe care about what hardships their fathers endured, how hard they worked, what good marks they got, how strict their parents were? As facts, yes, but not as examples. They like to hear about their parents' youth and exploits until a moral lesson creeps into the legend. At the first sign of an ulterior meaning, they shy off.

How can they, from their limited knowledge, explain that times were different, conditions quite unlike what they are facing? They might point out that they themselves were not like either parent and therefore could not be expected to react to the same stimuli or behave the same way.

Only the person who has been through an experience can profit by it. He cannot pass the lesson on. Mr. Jones can see to it that he does not make the mistakes in rearing his children that his parents made in rearing him. But he cannot make his children follow the path which he has found best.

Nothing exasperates a boy or girl more than a lesson drawn from his parents' past. Short of being rude, and hurting his parents, he has no comeback. He cannot retort, "Well I don't want to do as you did, and I don't want to be like you," however much he may want to.

He is an individual, not merely part of a family, and right or wrong, he has his own way to make, his own destiny to fulfill.

This year through the cooperative efforts of the railroads, the grain elevators and the flour and feed mills, the railroads have handled the heaviest crop of wheat from the southwestern states for any year since 1931, without car shortage, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, recently announced.

Willy Nilly's Idea

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WILLY NILLY went right over to call on the Galumps.

"I hear," he said, "that you are moving away from here and that you want to sell your place."

Grandpa Grouchy Galump stroked his beard and Grandma Grouchy Galump drew her little gray shawl more tightly around her shoulders. They were indeed astonished by what Willy Nilly said.

"You're a gnome, a man with second-sight, there is something strange about you," muttered Grandpa Grouchy Galump without stopping for breath. "We have only talked this over with each other and yet you come and know what we are planning to do."

"I did not know about it without being told," said Willy Nilly.

Grandpa and Grandma Grouchy Galump looked at each other.

"That makes it all the more unusual," said Grandma. "Nobody could have told you as we have told nobody." And then she and Grandpa looked at each other and if they had spoken they would have said:

"It is well to get away from here. The Puddle Muddlers are too smart."

"I was wondering," continued Willy Nilly, "if I might buy your house and grounds. I have a little money set aside and I would like this additional land for my animal friends, and your house would do beautifully for them in the cold weather."

"Use our house for an animal house!" shrieked Grandma Grouchy Galump.

But Grandpa gave her a hard look and, pretending to rearrange her shawl, he whispered in her ear:

"Be careful. Don't insult him. After all we want to sell."

A Washington Daybook

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Complete details of how Governor Landon composes his speeches are known perhaps only to himself and his closest intimates, but here is a flash picture of the general framework.

Besides his own outlines, various drafts are submitted by his aides. Those close to him get the idea he is a good editor. He picks and chooses, rearranges and coordinates, ripping paragraphs apart until almost the last minute.

He has trouble finishing a speech and letting go of it. Before his recent eastern invasion, reporters were told that advance copies of a speech were to be ready for them one day, and the next day that it was not yet finished. A new paragraph was added to the Chautauqua educational speech less than a half hour before it was delivered.

Confers Often With Star

NEWSPAPERMEN appear at times close to the governor's elbow. He talks frequently by telephone with the Kansas City Star group—Roy Roberts, Lacy Haynes and Henry J. Haskell.

Less is said now about Charles P. Taft, once at the head of the table in the advisory group, and of Earl H. Taylor, agricultural writer. One good source says Taft drafted the labor section of the acceptance speech and after it became a subject of public controversy he wasn't so much about. Others insisted, however, that the labor section did not quite jibe with Taft's liberal reputation.

Olin Glen Saxon, head of the department of applied economics at Yale, holds a place close to Landon. The last "t's" were not crossed on the eastern group of speeches until Saxon had flown (a bit secretly) to Estes Park.

Ralph West Robey of Columbia university, writer on financial subjects and formerly a Roosevelt brain-truster, was at Estes Park working on the Buffalo tax-finance speech.

Seeks Indirect Slaps

LANDON often spends much time in an effort to phrase a blow at the New Deal by indirection. That is, he sometimes seeks to leave a certain feeling with his audience through the formation of a group of sentences, rather than by direct statement.

Kirby Hawkin, English-accented radio voice, is available for consultation on "sound effects." He was at Estes Park, sent by Bill Bleckert, public relations director of the Republican national committee, whose private advertising firm specializes in radio work. Hawkin also made the eastern trip.

Some of the experts claim the best "sound effect" sentence was Landon's own. It was, they said, the "rudgard" crack at the 1935 tax bill. One source close to Landon said he insisted on the word from the start, overruling squeamish national committee advisers. When he got to Topeka he smoothed it over, and his audience rose to it.

More than one of his aides are guessing that Landon will use even more of his own stuff hereafter, and thereby improve his delivery.

Avenues Of Fashion with Esquire

FIELD OF FASHION

An atmosphere of smartness is created by the men of recognized fashion leadership who frequent the polo matches in all parts of the country. Having practically taken the polo coat and the polo shirt off the backs of the players, fashion observers watch not only the participants but also these smartly attired spectators, as a guide to currently smart clothes for country and spectator sportswear. Much favored is the suit of Shetland, the heavier type of brogue of reversed calf or calf, and accessories that have found favor for wear with informal apparel.

The fashionable Shetland pattern in the black and white, or brown and tan herringbone, made in a three button, high roll, notch lapel model.

The important shirt fashion of the season—new dusty colors that are neither grotesquely dark nor unnecessarily light.

The husky-soled, semi-brogue, brown calf shoe is an excellent choice for the informal country outfit, while the companion sock is the wool rib hose with horizontal stripes.

An appropriate snap brim felt hat has a touch of the Tyrolean influence.

Landon to Speak At Portland, Maine On Saturday Night

Topeka, Kas., Sept 9 (AP)—Gov. Alf M. Landon rushed preparations today—his 49th birthday—for a dramatic push to Portland, Maine, where he said an address Saturday night will mark his participation "in the first fighting repudiation' of the policies of President Roosevelt

"I am going to Maine," the Republican presidential nominee said in an unexpected one-sentence announcement last night, "to help rededicate that state to the good government for which it has always stood and to participate in the first fighting repudiation at the polls of the kind of government this country has had for the last three years"

Landon's address will close the Republican state campaign in Maine The election, first in the land this year, falls on Monday, September 14

Speech on Air

The Portland address, the only formal speech scheduled for the New England swing, will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company's red network at a time to be announced later

Rear platform appearances are planned in Massachusetts enroute to Portland from New York city

Leaving Topeka tomorrow night on the regular Santa Fe train at 8:25 p m (C S T), Landon was scheduled to arrive in Chicago Friday morning, continue via the New York Central to New York city, and there board a special train for his New England campaign

The announcement of the trip came as a surprise His campaign tour into Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Illinois late this month had been projected as his next major major foray The decision automatically cancelled, for the time being, a scheduled national conference here Friday of Young Republican leaders

National Chairman John Hamilton predicted at Chicago that the Republicans would carry Maine "all down the line in excess of 50,000"

Whether Landon would see Herbert Hoover, now in New York, was not known Previously Landon said he hoped to confer with Hoover as the former President returned westward from New York

A Birthday Cake

Landon observed his birthday anniversary at the office A big three-tiered cake, decorated with a sunflower, was presented by 26 state "Landon Business Women's Leagues."

The battle for Landon's present post opened in Kansas last night At Salina, Walter A Huxman, the Democratic nominee for governor, accused Landon of letting local municipalities and the national government bear all the relief burden and of failing to adequately support the schools At McPherson, Will G West, the Republican nominee, praised the "wise leadership" of Landon and pledged "the same economical conduct of state affairs"

Our Neighbors Whose Fame is International

(One of a series of articles of outstanding people in Kingston and Ulster county whose business or artistic endeavors have brought general recognition.—Ed.)

MRS. ANTON SEIDL

Not only are there a goodly number of internationally famous men in Ulster county and Kingston, but there are also women of international fame of whom we are justly proud and appreciative.

Of these, perhaps the most famous in the world of music both in Europe and in America is Mrs Anton Seidl, widow of Anton Seidl, the world famed conductor of Wagnerian Opera at Beyreuth and of The Metropolitan Opera in New York city But Mrs Seidl is far-famed in her own right for she was one of the great stars in early Wagnerian opera in Europe and America.

For many years now, this charming and delightful women having hosts of friends, has made her home in Kingston, living for some years with her companion "Bertha" on Washington avenue, to be near her friends of the George Burgevin family, and later taking an apartment at The Kirkland where she now lives

In spite of the fact that she has been totally deaf for years and in frail health, Mrs. Seidl is a woman of rarest courage, cheery disposition and blessed with that saving sense of humor that makes almost any hardship endurable She is a beautiful woman whose appreciation of her friends and of all things good and beautiful is as keen as it has always been, and like all truly great people is excedingly retiring and modest, quite without self-seeking In the earlier days of Wagnerian Opera she was one of the stars of first magnitude, singing in every royal opera house in Europe before coming to this country where she won equal fame at the Metropolitan and when as "Seidl-Krause", she toured with the Metropolitan Company throughout our country.

Born in Vienna

Born of a titled family of Vienna, and known as she grew to young womanhood as "The Viennese Beauty", Augusta Krause early developed musical talent and an intense desire to become an opera singer. This was much against the wishes of her family. Finally, however, her father allowed her to leave the convent where she was educated, and took her to Hans Richter, then considered the most famous operatic voice teacher in Europe, leaving it to Hans Richter to decide whether or not she had a voice of sufficient operatic promise for him to be willing to accept her as a pupil.

Herr Richter not only accepted the gifted and beautiful young singer, but while teaching her taught only one other pupil.

Augusta Krause had a rarely beautiful lyric soprano, great dramatic ability, and as nearly perfect training as falls to the lot of any singer. As a result she made her debut at the Royal Opera at Vienna and was given from the very start the young dramatic parts in the great operas in which she excelled.

Even this much of her story which sounds like fairyland except for the hours and hours of tremendously hard and incessant study required, makes us take pause to consider that easily in the memory of middle-aged music lovers right here in our own county and city, Wagnerian opera came into being and was for years the source of intense and often acrid discussion as to its merits. Established in Europe, it found its permanent home at Beyreuth which became and still is the Mecca of all who learn to know and most sincerely understand the great musical works of the mastermind that created Der Ring des Niebelungen, Tristan and Isolde, Parsifal, Lohengrin, Die Meistersinger, Tannhauser, etc.

It was at Beyreuth that Anton Seidl became a part of the home of Richard Wagner for seven years On one occasion Wagner called his family together, in the presence of Anton Seidl and said to "Mother" and his daughters, "I have nothing to worry about now. My work will be carried on by Seidl, for he conducts exactly as I do"

Anton Seidl, later became the idol of the Metropolitan Opera audiences, as conductor. And it was with Anton Seidl that Augusta Krause received her final operatic training, a very severe one. More than anything else in the world she wanted to sing, but even so it was not always easy to understand many hardships seemingly superimposed upon her and others of the caste, by their master, whose goal was perfection.

Mrs. Seidl tells now with amusement of her indignation when Seidl once asked her if she had parts which should have been given to her. Later she learned that he did this in order to cure her of any possibility of being arrogant as were some of the singers. The great conductor had another rule which was, "One must be able to do every thing even to understanding about the properties for the sake of the music."

Apropos of the necessity of such a rule, Mrs. Seidl has told very interestingly of some of the earlier experiences of other Wagnerian artists both in Beyreuth and this country.

Stage Hardships.

While the story is well known that when Wagner asked the Rhine maidens to enter the machines which were to enable them to appear to be swimming while they were singing, they absolutely refused. With tears running down his cheeks the great maestro begged and finally exclaimed "Then all is lost." This won the hearts of the singers and they timidly but loyally entered the machines and the opera continued in rehearsal and finally in performance. But one had to be behind the scenes again and to recall Seidl's "rule," to fully appreciate it when it is known that when one of the Rhine-maidens was in her machine raised 14 feet high. It was found not to have been thoroughly fastened and she almost lost her life, but sang in spite of it all.

"Seidl-Krause" had her own trying experiences, but she had also as today a saving sense of humor. When singing the role of Elizabeth in Tannhauser at The Metropolitan Opera House, she came singing down over the hills and rocks—at rehearsal fortunately—she found that those same hills and rocks had not been nailed down securely and she received a very bad fall Needless to say such an accident never happened again, either at rehearsal or performance.

While en tour to Chicago one time, the trunks were late and there was no make-up available. Again singing the part of Elizabeth, Mrs Seidl tells with keep appreciation, of her predicament when it came to the fatal scene Being naturally rosy cheeked, in her embarrassment she grew ruddier and ruddier and must have presented anything but the appearance of a dying woman.

Just these touches of the human side of those who lifted up Wagnerian opera almost to a worshipful height, give one a far more realistic impression of that great world of music, which once could be heard by but the very most fortunate few, but which today is given in all of the great musical centers of the world and may be heard if not seen right in our own homes over the radio.

Many Roles Sung

Seidl-Krause sang the roles of Eva in Die Meistersinger, Elsa in Lohengrin, Elizabeth in Tannhauser, Sieglinde in "Die Walkure" (The Valkyrie) with Lilli Lehman as Brunhilde, and also that of each of the Rhine maidens at different times.

Augusta Krause married the great conductor, Anton Seidl, at Frankfort, and after singing for one season under him in Europe she came to this country, much against her better judgment because of our climate, to sing at the Metropolitan Opera House under Dr Leopold Damrosch. It was through her that her husband followed her to New York where he received the honored appointment as conductor of The Metropolitan Opera, following the sudden death of Dr. Damrosch.

But alas! Frau Seidl did not long charm and fascinate American opera audiences in spite of her beauty, her glorious voice and art, for her intuition about coming to America had been well founded Due to the rigors of the climate of New York city, she lost her most valued possession, her beautiful voice Though the tragedy was somewhat ameliorated when she regained it, she never returned to the operatic stage.

Nothing could be more delightful, when Mrs. Seidl has felt able, than to have her recall the earlier days of her career, telling of many other great artists with whom she sang or whom she knew. Nor did she hesitate to tell vividly of the past even though the conversations had to be carried on by writing.

Lilli Lehman, too, had learned Anton Seidl's "rule" regarding knowing everything even to the properties for the sake of the music, and one time when on tour there was no box for the poison she was to take, so a cigar box had its one grand chance in life and became an operatic property and a plain tumbler took the place of a beautiful drinking glass.

On occasion the great singer, Marianne Brandt, a contemporary of Seidl-Krause became hysterical over the fact that her costume was not being ready on time, whereupon Seidl-Krause advised her to leave off her hysteria lest she fail to sing her high D, and there was no more hysteria.

It would seem that in stage life as in real life, clothes and things have values often quite beyond their intrinsic values and there were many other interesting anecdotes of a similar character told by Mrs. Seidl.

Came to Catskills.

Nothing could be more beautiful and impressive than Mrs. Seidl's devotion and profound admiration for and appreciation of her husband, Anton Seidl. It was while he was conductor of the Metropolitan Opera that he came up into the Catskills, and had a very beautiful summer home at Fleischmanns for several years.

The Seidls were great dog lovers and had some six dogs, all members of their family, while living at Fleischmanns. But the particular pet was a Dachsund, "Mimi," who was a veritable musical critic. Whenever some new aspirant for musical fame was given an audience with Herr Seidl, Mimi would seat herself beside her master and listen to the performance. As long as all went well and there were no false notes, Mimi was very quiet indeed, but let a wrong note be sounded or some mistake be made, and Mimi would lift up her voice with a power and correctness (at least according to her ideas) that silenced the aspirant and usually the audition was at an end In traveling back and forth from New York to Fleischmanns during the summer, each of the dogs had his own chair in the Pullman cars, which just goes to prove that they were indeed members of the illustrious family.

After the sudden death of Anton Seidel in New York city in 1919, Mrs. Seidl gave up the charming Fleischmanns home and came to Kingston to live.

For years following, she devoted her time and strength to the loving task of making available to posterity the complete story of the life of her husband, one of the world's great musicians; gathering together letters and all sorts of valuable data, and presenting Columbia University with Mr. Seidl's incomparable musical library, including many "first" Wagnerian scores.

In fact it has seemed that Mrs Seidl's one joy in living has been to make generous gifts of mementos of her wonderful husband to appreciative friends and to institutions where future musicians might have the inspiration to be gained therefrom. Never once has she allowed a commercial taint of any of Mr. Seidl's musical possessions to take place. She herself possessed the original Paris version of Tannhauser, and as her gift it now reposes in the musical library at Weimar, after she had refused an offer of $8,000 for it.

Loving Cup.

One of the greatest treasures in Mrs Seidl's possession, following the death of Mr Seidl, was a very large and magnificent silver loving cup, presented to him on the stage of The Metropolitan Opera House by the directors of the Metropolitan It cost $3,000 and had $1,000 worth of silver in it The workmanship was by three of Gorham's leading silversmiths, for it was a Gorham masterpiece. Scenes from several of Wagner's leading operas were carved on the cup, in relief. It is said that it was large enough to hold twelve bottles of champagne.

This cup and one of his batons have been placed in the New American Museum on upper Fifth avenue as the nucleus of a Seidlannia that will be invaluable to the music lovers and students of oncoming generations, the mementos almost putting them in touch with the great conductor.

Willard van Keuren of this city, and his mother, who have been close friends of Mrs Seidl's for many years, have many greatly prized gifts, among them having been two batons One, Mr van Keuren gave to Dr. McKay of New York city, which this great lover of music, especially Wagnerian music, has had framed, together with a baton of Wagner's The one that Mr van Keuren has kept was presented to Anton Seidl at the time of his conducting the last of a series of concerts at the Waldorf Astoria.

Perhaps nothing else would as vividly picture the love and esteem in which Anton Seidl and his wife have been held in the highest world of music since his death than the fact that on the twenty-fifth anniversary of that tragic event, Mrs Seidl received some 200 letters, telegrams and cablegrams from all over the world, expressive of continuing sympathy for her and deepest admiration for him.

Sees Toscaninni.

It would seem a fitting close to this article about this wonderful woman who has gloried in her privilege to give up of her dearest treasures to make further known to musicians of all time, her famous husband, to tell the story of her visit to New York, where she was persuaded by friends to go with them to Carnegie Hall, to see, since she could not hear, Toscaninni conduct the Philarmonic Orchestra.

Not expecting to go to the concert, Mrs. Seidl was forced to appear in the box of friends in street costume, but that did not hinder many in the great audience from recognizing her, among them the conductor himself.

Apparently she soon forgot that she could hear nothing in her intense joy in watching the expressions of Toscaninni's face, and every movement of his baton, and she exclaimed "I know, I can see that he is a very great conductor."

When the curtain fell for the last time at the close of the opera, Mr Toscaninni and many distinguished people from the audience, came to the box where Mrs Seidl was, to express their sincere happiness in her presence there and to again pay tribute to her and Anton Seidl, the great conductor.

In so far as she has been able, Mrs Seidl has always taken deep interest in musical matters in Kingston, at one time being honorary vice-president of The Kingston Symphony Society.

The writer of this article wishes to thank Mr. Willard van Keuren for his generous and valuable assistance in gathering together the data for this article.—C. N. R.

Healey and Brophy Look for Dead Body, Find Old Mattress

Officer Walter Fitzgerald was patrolling his beat shortly after 4 o'clock this morning when an automobile drew up to the curb and the man in the driver's seat said "Officer as I was driving into the city from Abeel street I saw an object floating in the Rondout creek near the site of the old welcome arch that appeared to be that of a human body, and thought I had better report it to you"

Officer Fitzgerald thanked the man and promptly got police headquarters on the telephone which resulted in a call being sent out over the radio which was picked up by Officers Urban Healey and Clarence Brophy in one of the radio cars.

The officers sped out Abeel street and near the entrance to the city spied the object floating in the creek It was too far away to ascertain just whether it was a human body or not

Nothing daunted the two officers commandeered a rowboat and with Officer Healey at the oars and Officer Brophy at the helm steered a straight course out into the creek As they approached the object in the water both officers sighed.

"Jumping grasshoppers" or words to that effect said one officer

"Ditto" said the other.

The floating object was an old mattress

It continued its interrupted journey down the creek toward the river mouth.

Christmas Cards

Safford and Scudder, Golden Rule Jewelers of 310 Wall street, have some really fine bargains in personal Christmas cards but the ad which appeared in Friday's Freeman went a bit too far when Christmas cards were advertised at 50 cents per hundred. This should have read 50 cards for $1 and up Safford and Scudder thank those who sent orders at the misquoted price and trust they will realize that even at $1 for 50 these cards are a real bargain.

Registration of all unemployed persons on relief in Canada is scheduled to start September 1.

The World of Stamps

By QUINTON JAMES

In a fair share of its recent issues Czechslovakia has concentrated on the pictorial idea, with scenes of various points of interest in the country predominating This plan is carried forward again in a set of nine stamps, just placed in use, with values ranging from 1 20 to 10 koruna

Castles and other structures are illustrated together with their surrounding terrain The overall design is similar to previous issues with the name of the country in white letters filling a line across the top of the stamp The figures of value also in white, are in boxes in each corner at the bottom

The scenes, as pictured include these 1 20 k red violet, old castle of Painok, 1 50-k red Banska Bystirca, 2-k green Mt Sviwok with castle, 2 50-k deep blue, ruins of Castle Strecno, 3-k brown, castle of Cesky Raj, 3 50-k light violet, scene in the town of Slavkov, 4-k deep violet, statue of King George of Bohemia, 5-k green, old town hall with its famous clock, in the ancient capital of Moravia, 10-k Bracislavia with ruined castle and the Danube river in the foreground

The three higher values are of a somewhat larger format than the lower

Collectors Spend

Stamp collectors generally have an open pocketbook when it comes to keeping their stamp albums up to date An indication of this is apparent from some recently available statistics dealing with the sales of the Philatelic agency in Washington, established in 1921 to take care of the sale of stamps to collectors Only unused stamps of current issues and recent ones still in stock are handled

In the 14½ years since the formation of the agency, the total amount of stamps sold figures at something like seven and a quarter million dollars In the fiscal year ending 1st June 30 the total was $1 846 26 , 79 Compared with the previous fiscal year, however, it showed a drop the figure for 1935 being $2 240,484 31 But that sum included the Farley imperforates, the special printings of 20 varieties which were prepared to meet the protests of collectors against what was described as 'created rarities."

Service Heroes

Uncle Sam s set of army-navy heroes continues to be a possibility for the future with plans delayed for the issuance of the ten stamps five for the army and five for the navy, each group running from 1 to 5 cents Delay seems to have been occasioned by the absence of President Roosevelt from Washington on vacation, a visit to Canada and tour of the drouth area His approval of the designs to be used is awaited

These stamps originally were to start appearing in August with the 1 centers continuing with an additional denomination a month until December If this plan is followed it will probably be early 1937 before the issue is completed

Official Bisect

It isn't often that an official bisect comes out In fact it has been years since one has appeared But collectors have a current one to add to this rather rare group

hTe stamp comes from Guatemala the particular item being the 1-centavo brown and carmine picturing Lake Atitlan of the recently issued set it has a diagonal perforation running from the upper left hand corner to the lower right

This makes possible the separation of the oblong stamp into two triangles either of which can be used to pay postage of ½ centavo The reason behind the diagonal perforation is to provide lower value stamps than were available in the original designing

Bisects, which, in the language of the philatelists mean stamps cut in two by some official manner to create two adhesives of a value one-half of the original denomination, have not been numerous Generally such stamps come into existence due to an urgent need or in cases where an overprint lowering the face is not satisfactory.

Fall Best Time For Lawn Making

Geneva, N Y., Sept. 9—With most grasses seeding themselves naturally in the fall, the householder who wishes to make a new lawn or patch up an old one would do well to take a tip from Mother Nature and do his seeding in the early fall, says Prof M T Munn, seed specialist at the State Experiment Station here

Fall lawn seeding should be completed by the middle of September, advises Prof. Munn, as seedings made later than September 20 often fail Aside from the time of seeding, the battle is half won in making a good lawn with the use of clean, vigorous seed mixtures containing the right kind of grasses for lawn seeding, declares this authority, who warns against the dangers of cheap lawn grass mixtures Many mixtures have been placed on the market which, upon examination in the seed laboratory, have been found to contain a high percentage of chaff and dirt and many kinds of weed seeds and which have been made up quite largely of grasses entirely unsuited for lawn purposes.

Fertilizing Pays Too

The purchase of high-grade Kentucky bluegrass and redtop seed and mixing them at home at the rate of four parts bluegrass to one part redtop is advocated as an excellent means of securing a really desirable general purpose lawn grass mixture A small amount of white Dutch clover may be added to the mixture if one likes clover in the lawn These unmixed seeds or high-quality special mixtures are obtainable from all good seed stores or seed houses, says Prof Munn

It is recommended that this mixture be sown at the rate of one-fourth ounce per square yard for old lawns or one-half ounce per square yard for a new lawn and that the seed be raked in lightly so as just to cover it and no more Complete fertilizer, pulverized sheep manure, or fertile loam or top soil also may be applied with profit to lawns in the fall Many lawns have suffered badly from the dry summer weather and also show lack of adequate fertility to maintain a good growth of grass and to crowd out the weeds Such lawns should receive some fertilizer treatment this fall.

Final Test

Display Kitchen And Living Room

Ithaca, N. Y., Sept. 9.—Two of the most-used rooms in the home, the living room and the kitchen, are displayed among home bureau exhibits at this year's State Fair in Syracuse

A Living Room For All the Family

How to make a living room that is not just a "company" room but a place where the whole family wants to gather and stay is featured by the Monroe County Home Bureau. So planned that each person can do what he wants, this living room shows built-in cupboards and shelves of different heights for pottery, maps, books and toys; a green day-bed where a tired mother may relax from household duties, and a chintz-covered lounging chair just right for father's evening reading

A mulberry-and-ivory color scheme, an oil painting, and an inconspicuous design in a buff-colored wallpaper give the room a pleasing background for daughter's entertaining; while the cherry and maple furniture, the heavy mulberry rug, and the inexpensive but attractive lamps and other accessories are durable enough to withstand children s active play

Members of the Monroe county state fair committee are. Mrs. Vernon Plain, Pittsford; Mrs. Elstonn Holton and Mrs. Sidney Backus, Webster, Mrs Bert Corby, Honeoye Falls; Mrs. H. C Canfield, East Rochester; Mrs. John Van Ostrand, Henrietta; and Mrs., Alvin Huch, Fairport.

Homemade Kitchen Conveniences

A kitchen by all the family might be a suitable title for Genesee county's exhibit. Home Bureau members show how a kitchen may be made more efficient by articles that any member of the family can make Even 10-year-old Junior, they say, can learn to make the knife racks and drawer arrangements for silver ware and cutlery and the filing boxes for recipes that are on display.

The exhibitors show a business center's relation to better meal planning, as household accounts may be kept, and recipes, which otherwise might be lost or forgotten, are on hand for instant reference.

One Genesee county homemaker shows how she and her husband transformed an old washstand into a service wagon, which saves many steps and makes an attractive decorative feature in the dining room.

Hedricks to Play Colonials Sunday At Pan-Am Field

The Hedrick Brewers, newly crowned city champions, will cross bats with the Kingston Colonials at the Pan-Am Field on Sunday afternoon. The game will be the first of a series of two-out-of-three. The series will wind up the season for both teams. Game time will be 3 o'clock.

Joe Brown will get the call for the Brewers with Gene Rider behind the platter while "King Kong" Shackett will probably toss them over for the Colonials with Joe Hoffman on the receiving end.

The Brewers have an impressive record so far this season, winning 27 and losing only seven. They have won their last 12 games straight. The Colonials have not fared any too well and the series with the champions will give them a chance to get back on the winning road before the season closes. A large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the opening contest.

Tennis Matches at Woodstock Today

The Woodstock tennis tourney will be resumed this afternoon when Stan Hancock and Frank Luce, of Newburgh, play off their semi-final match in the singles. They will then team together in the doubles and two matches have been scheduled for them. Bob Herzog and Bill Lester are already in the finals waiting the outcome of the upper half brackets.

Randall Rose is in the final bracket in the singles waiting the result of the Hancock-Luce match this afternoon. He will probably meet the winner tomorrow afternoon for the first prize.

John Burgevin and Hank Osterhoudt were routed out of the doubles tourney Monday afternoon in straight sets by Chase and Heermon. The scores were 6-4, 7-5.

City Leaguers to Meet This Evening

The City League players will hold their final meeting of the season tonight at the City Court room in the City Hall at 7:30 o'clock. All managers are requested to be present to clean up the final business on hand. Prize money will be distributed.

Jack Sharkey isn't the only glutton for punishment. King Alphonso is said to have been anxious, for some time, to get back to Spain.

Hedricks to Play Colonials Sunday At Pan-Am Field

The Hedrick Brewers, newly crowned city champions, will cross bats with the Kingston Colonials at the Pan-Am Field on Sunday afternoon. The game will be the first of a series of two-out-of-three. The series will wind up the season for both teams. Game time will be 3 o'clock.

Joe Brown will get the call for the Brewers with Gene Rider behind the platter while "King Kong" Shackett will probably toss them over for the Colonials with Joe Hoffman on the receiving end.

The Brewers have an impressive record so far this season, winning 27 and losing only seven. They have won their last 12 games straight. The Colonials have not fared any too well and the series with the champions will give them a chance to get back on the winning road before the season closes. A large crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the opening contest.

Tennis Matches at Woodstock Today

The Woodstock tennis tourney will be resumed this afternoon when Stan Hancock and Frank Luce, of Newburgh, play off their semi-final match in the singles. They will then team together in the doubles and two matches have been scheduled for them. Bob Herzog and Bill Lester are already in the finals waiting the outcome of the upper half brackets.

Randall Rose is in the final bracket in the singles waiting the result of the Hancock-Luce match this afternoon. He will probably meet the winner tomorrow afternoon for the first prize.

John Burgevin and Hank Osterhoudt were routed out of the doubles tourney Monday afternoon in straight sets by Chase and Heermon. The scores were 6-4, 7-5.

City Leaguers to Meet This Evening

The City League players will hold their final meeting of the season tonight at the City Court room in the City Hall at 7:30 o'clock. All managers are requested to be present to clean up the final business on hand. Prize money will be distributed.

Jack Sharkey isn't the only glutton for punishment. King Alphonso is said to have been anxious, for some time, to get back to Spain.

New Orleans Man Rises From Clerk To Mayor

Robert Sidney Maestri, New Orleans mayor, was one of Huey Long's trusted political advisers.

New Orleans (AP)—There's no Horatio Alger touch to the success story of New Orleans' new mayor

Although Robert Sidney Maestri became a wealthy property owner before he was 30, it was no effortless, overnight result but a product of years of hard work, thrift and an uncommon judgment of land values

Twenty-eight years ago Maestri, 19, was earning $7 50 a week keeping books He sold furniture on the side and put his earnings into real estate Today he is considered the city's largest property owner.

Entered Politics As Favor

He entered politics 12 years ago as a favor to a friend—Martin Behrman, who had been mayor from 1904 to 1920 and in 1924 was attempting a comeback With Maestri directing his campaign, Behrman was elected

Four years later a fiery young lawyer named Huey P Long had just been elected governor Between Long and Maestri developed a friendship probably closer than between Long and any of his other associates

When a decision was to be made, "Colonel Bob" sat in the background at the conference of Long's lieutenants appraised the situation from every angle and quietly passed his advice to "the Kingfish" Long respected Maestri's political judgment

Succeeded Long

Long's death elevated Maestri to leadership of the powerful Louisiana machine He is credited with making young Dick Leche governor and with ironing out differences that threatened the organization

Under Leche peace was made between New Orleans and the city administration The legislature returned to the city-self-governing and taxing powers taken from it when Long was punishing his enemy Mayor T Semmes Walmsley

Wolmsley, in accordance with his promise to resign as mayor whenever the city's local authority had been restored, stepped out Maestri stepped in.

A special Report

Dr. Harlod Clarke filed the following special report:

"A written complaint concerning noise at a milk dairy was filed with the Health Officer and was referred to the Food inspector to make preliminary investigations. Investigation on August 17 and 18 did not substantiate the complaint.

The temporary chairman of the Noise Committee was consulted who joined in an investigation on August 22. Another investigation with a police officer was made on August 22.

The freight truck arrives at a variable hour of from 12:00 m. to 1:20 a. m. The truck is backed into the yard, the empty cases unloaded and the filled cases loaded. The operation from arrival until departure was not over 20 minutes. When all was still in the street, the clatter could be heard in a car parked at the curb. A passing auto would drown out the noise. Voices were audible in the street.

The milk business has been operated at this address over 25 years There has been no growth by purchases, only the normal expansion."

The report was adopted.

Routine business was transacted and the board adjourned.

SNAKE'S RATTLE WAKENS COUPLE ASLEEP IN YARD

Robert Lee, Tex. (AP)—The rattle of a snake awakened Mr. and Mrs. Will Wood one hot night when they were sleeping in a low farm wagon in their yard near here.

Afraid to move or lie still, they called for help. Their son-in-law, Jake Sparks, brought a flashlight, found the snake draped over a wheel of the wagon, its head dancing arcs near the couple.

Sparks killed the snake. It measured six feet, had 14 rattles.

MAN THINKS 1894 LUCKY, GIVES DATA TO PROVE IT

Washington, Kas. (AP) — Sherman F. Lull believes 13 a lucky number and its 1894.

He and his wife were born that year. For years they have had car license No. 1894.

In the Republican primary this year Lull was running second in the race for nomination for county treasurer. It appeared he was beaten with 1,837 votes to 1,879 for his opponent. The absentee ballots came in, boosting Lull's total to 1,894, enough to win.

Study American Utilities Rates

Washington, Sept 9 (AP)—The public's stake in gas and electric utilities was debated today by the men who build and run such systems in four continents, after they had heard praise and condemnation of utility holding companies yesterday's sessions of the third world power conference.

Dissecting the utility regulation schemes of all major nations, tthe delegates studied a criticism of American rate-fixing methods by William E Moser, school of citizen director at Syracuse Universitty, and James C Bonbright, New York state power authority trustee

A defense of United States utilities regulation — particularly by state commissions—was presented to the 3,000 technicians and industrialists by John E. Zimmerman of Philadelphia, president of the United Gas Improvement Company

He asserted that these commissions for a quarter of a century "have discharged their difficult duties satisfactorily," adding that federal "yardsticks," such as TVA, "would be of no assistance" in testing "the reasonableness of rates of private companies"

Bonbright and Mosher argued in their paper that commission regulation "has been but partially successful" and that "thoroughly unworkable methods of valuation" had been imposed by the courts.

In another auditorium delegates were awarded in four languages that the world soon must take stringent measures to husbannd its shrinking oil and coal deposits

"In most countries it is recognized that the conservation of coal is a problem that requires immediate serious attention," declared Dr John Frey of the interior department and Bertrand L Johnson of of the federal mines bureau.

H. C. Fowler, mines bureau engineer, added that America had no "well-articulated policy of use and conservation" of oil and gas

A prediction that "huge waste" of natural gas and domination by "private monopoly" through holding companies eventually "may require the socialization of the industry" was made yesterday by Walter B. Wooden, federal trade commission attorney.

'Think I'm Santa', Says 'Bossy' Gillis

Newburyport, Mass., Sept. 9 (AP)—Annoyed with men welfare recipients who "are drunk most of the time and bring eight or ten kids into the world for other people to support," Mayor Andrew J "Bossy" Gillis would set them to work in a nearby silver mine

"I sought to get hard boiled about these men who hang around half drunk week in and week out," Newburyport's red-haired mayor told the city council last night.

"There ought to be a law made They ought not to have the right to come into city hall and get money to go out and get drunk. They ought to be made to work in a penitentiary and support the eight or ten kids they bring into the world for other people to support."

When the council explained that $64,400 was necessary to maintain all public welfare departments for the remainder of the year, Gillis exclaimed they "think I'm Santa Claus"

Under Gillis' plan the welfare recipients who spend their money on liquor would work the mine, idle 15 years, and live in the buildings on the property.
